

Report: Fewer women die in childbirth

November 16 2007

---

Pregnancy is getting safer for women in many parts of the world, with the exception of sub-Saharan Africa, researchers said.

The journal Reproductive Health Matters marked the 20th anniversary of the World Health Organization's Safe Motherhood Initiative with an analysis of data related to the risks of childbirth.

The report found the maternal mortality ratio fell nearly 5.5 percent from 430 to 400 per 100,000 live births between 1990 and 2005.

Maternal deaths fell by more than 20 percent in developed areas of North Africa, Latin America, the Caribbean and the South Pacific, while in sub-Saharan Africa the number of maternal deaths increased between 1990 and 2005, the report said.

Copyright 2007 by United Press International

Citation: Report: Fewer women die in childbirth (2007, November 16) retrieved 2 May 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2007-11-women-die-childbirth.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--