

Golden Flower dried lily bulb is recalled

December 5 2007

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration announced the recall Wednesday of Golden Flower dried lily bulb because it might contained undeclared sulfites.

Prosperity Resources International Inc. of Irvington, N.J., initiated the recall because people who have severe sensitivity to sulfites run the risk of serious or life-threatening allergic reactions if they consume the product.

The recalled product, manufactured in China, is packaged in uncoded 12-ounce plastic bags and was sold nationwide.

Consumers with questions can contact the company at 973-371-9688.
