

Study: 6.5 percent of adults active enough at work

May 26 2011, By MIKE STOBBE , AP Medical Writer

(AP) -- If you think you do enough physical activity at work to keep you healthy, you're probably wrong.

Health researchers say only about 6.5 percent of U.S. adults meet physical activity guidelines while they're working. And those that do are disproportionately Hispanic men and men with less than a high school education.

The national estimate - the first of its kind - was reported Thursday in a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention publication, Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. It's based on a 2007 national telephone survey.

Somewhere between 45 percent and 65 percent of adults say they exercise enough outside of work to meet government recommendations for physical activity, according to earlier studies.

©2011 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Citation: Study: 6.5 percent of adults active enough at work (2011, May 26) retrieved 2 May 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2011-05-percent-adults.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
