

Benefits available to those exposed to 9/11 toxins

June 24 2013

(AP)—New York officials are reaching out to people who may have been physically affected by the 9/11 attacks to tell them they may still be eligible for health benefits.

U.S. Reps. Carolyn Maloney and Jerrold Nadler are joining community and labor officials and emergency workers on Monday for the start of an outreach campaign to publicize the available benefits.

Tens of thousands of people are eligible for free medical exams, treatment and medication under the World Trade Center Health Program. They include those who lived and worked in lower Manhattan and Brooklyn in the year following 9/11—even those who may have been exposed just briefly to possible toxins.

There's no deadline to file health claims.

Oct. 3 is the deadline for the Victims Compensation Fund for economic losses due to 9/11 injuries.

© 2013 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Benefits available to those exposed to 9/11 toxins (2013, June 24) retrieved 27 April 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2013-06-benefits-exposed-toxins.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.