

Salmonella linked to chicken ongoing, 524 sickened

May 28 2014, by Mary Clare Jalonick

An outbreak of antibiotic-resistant salmonella linked to a California chicken company continues even after more than a year.

There have been 50 new illnesses in the past two months. Since March 2013, 574 people have been sickened.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says there are about eight new reported salmonella illnesses linked to the outbreak a week—most of them in California.

So far, there's been no recall of Foster Farms chicken.

The Agriculture Department is monitoring Foster Farms facilities and says measured rates of salmonella in the company's products have been going down since the outbreak began.

The department threatened to shut down the facilities last year but let Foster Farms stay open after the company had made immediate changes to reduce salmonella rates.

© 2014 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Salmonella linked to chicken ongoing, 524 sickened (2014, May 28) retrieved 5 May 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2014-05-salmonella-linked-chicken-ongoing-sickened.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.