

Schools seek changes to healthier lunch rules

May 5 2014, by Mary Clare Jalonick

---

School nutrition directors across the country say government-mandated changes to cafeteria menus have been expensive and difficult to put in place.

Starting next school year, all grains served in schools will have to be whole-grain rich, or more than half whole grain. That includes pastas, rolls, biscuits, pizza crust, tortillas and even grits.

The government is also demanding lower sodium, healthier snacks and more fruits and vegetables.

The requirements are part of an effort to make school lunches and breakfasts healthier. The new standards have been phased in over the last two school years, with more changes coming in 2014.

But some schools say the targets are not feasible and kids are rejecting the new offerings. They are asking Washington for changes.

© 2014 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Schools seek changes to healthier lunch rules (2014, May 5) retrieved 23 April 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2014-05-schools-healthier-lunch.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--