

Wellness visits, physicals need different documentation

August 22 2014

(HealthDay)—Documentation rules for annual wellness visits (AWVs) for Medicare differ from those for preventive visits, which are not covered by Medicare, according to an article published Aug. 5 in Medical Economics.

Measuring the body mass index and the patient's depression are about the only elements that AWVs and preventive physicals have in common. AWVs require a Health Risk Assessment that needs to be filled out first by the patient and reviewed with the physician.

According to Medical Economics, AWVs also must include a patient history, including family history, current medications and supplements, and other current providers; a basic physical assessment (i.e., height, weight, blood pressure); assessment of cognitive function; review of age-appropriate screenings; identification of current risk factors; and personalized health advice. However, they are not head-to-toe physicals.

The article advises practices to "make sure appointments are clearly marked for the AWW, so the patient fills out the appropriate paperwork and the physician uses the correct documentation template."

More information: More Information

Copyright © 2014 HealthDay. All rights reserved.

Citation: Wellness visits, physicals need different documentation (2014, August 22) retrieved 8 May 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2014-08-wellness-physicals-documentation.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--