

Financial factors most motivating in nurses' retirement choices

January 6 2015

(HealthDay)—Older nurses report leaving the workforce before retirement or pension age primarily for financial, social, and health reasons, according to a study published online Dec. 19 in the Journal of Clinical Nursing.

Christine Duffield, Ph.D., R.N., from the University of Technology in Sydney, and colleagues analyzed data from the Mature Age Workers Questionnaire, the Job Descriptive Index, and the Job in General Scale to assess job satisfaction, intention to retire, and factors encouraging retirement in 319 registered nurses aged 45 years and older in Australia (July to August 2007).

The researchers found that the mean age proposed for leaving the workforce was 61.7 years. The primary motivators for retiring were financial considerations (40.1 percent), nurse health (17.4 percent), and retirement age of partner (13.3 percent).

"Consideration will need to be given to ensure that they continue to experience job satisfaction and are physically and mentally able to undertake demanding work," the authors write.

More information: Abstract
Full Text \(subscription or payment may be required\)

Copyright © 2014 HealthDay. All rights reserved.

Citation: Financial factors most motivating in nurses' retirement choices (2015, January 6) retrieved 5 May 2024 from
<https://medicalxpress.com/news/2015-01-financial-factors-nurses-choices.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--