

Laughter is good medicine for nursing home residents

December 26 2016

(HealthDay)—Laughter therapy improves the quality of life of nursing home residents, according to a study published online Dec. 16 in the Journal of Clinical Nursing.

Nilgun Kuru and Gulumser Kublay, Ph.D., from the Hacettepe University Faculty of Nursing in Ankara, Turkey, compared the effectiveness of laughter therapy (two days per week for 21 sessions in total) in 32 nursing home residents from one nursing home versus a control group of 33 nursing home residents at another nursing home who did not receive laughter therapy.

The researchers found that total and subscale (physical functioning, role-physical, bodily pain, general health, vitality, social functioning, role-emotional, and spiritual health) quality-of-life scores significantly increased in the experimental group after the laughter therapy intervention compared with the pretest.

"Nursing home management should integrate laughter therapy into health care and laughter therapy should be provided as a routine nursing intervention," the authors write.

More information: Full Text \(subscription or payment may be required\)

Copyright © 2016 HealthDay. All rights reserved.

Citation: Laughter is good medicine for nursing home residents (2016, December 26) retrieved 25 April 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2016-12-laughter-good-medicine-nursing-home.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--