

Time for physicians to prepare for impending appropriate use mandate

February 27 2017

Within a year, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) will implement a provision in the Protecting Access to Medicare Act (PAMA) that requires physicians to consult appropriate use criteria (AUC) using CMS-approved computer-based clinical decision support mechanisms when ordering advanced imaging procedures.

Under PAMA, providers will have to submit proof that applicable AUC were consulted to have their claims processed. After the CMS collects 2 years of data, "outlier" physicians will be subject to prior authorization, thus possibly limiting patients' and physicians' access to advanced imaging procedures.

Because coronary artery disease evaluation is a priority clinical area, most cardiac imaging procedures will be subject to the initial rollout of the mandate.

Once PAMA is implemented, the burden of reducing inappropriate use will move largely from payers to providers. In preparation for this shift, physicians will need to be educated about expectations under PAMA, which should include increasing their understanding of appropriate use.

This will require close collaboration between professional societies representing referring providers and imaging specialists and involvement of all stakeholders.

More information: Annals of Internal Medicine,

<http://annals.org/aim/article/doi/10.7326/M16-2673>

Provided by American College of Physicians

Citation: Time for physicians to prepare for impending appropriate use mandate (2017, February 27) retrieved 25 April 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2017-02-physicians-impending-mandate.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.