

Contaminated food in South Africa kills 180 in last year

March 6 2018

Several southern African countries have recalled some processed meats from South Africa after the deaths of 180 people there from contaminated food since early last year.

The African News Agency reported Tuesday that Swaziland, Zambia and Mozambique are among nations that have ordered the removal of meat products believed to be contaminated.

South Africa's health minister, Aaron Motsoaledi, says there have been a total of 950 cases of listeriosis since January 2017 and that 180 people have died.

The South African government is advising people to avoid processed meat products that are sold as "ready-to-eat" and identified a food factory in the northeast city of Polokwane as the source of the outbreak.

© 2018 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Contaminated food in South Africa kills 180 in last year (2018, March 6) retrieved 20 April 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2018-03-contaminated-food-south-africa-year.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--