

Restaurant closed after 39 cases of suspected salmonella

July 10 2018

---

A Massachusetts restaurant has been shut down until further notice after nearly 40 people reported getting sick during a suspected salmonella outbreak.

The North Reading Board of Health posted an advisory saying the state Public Health Department had received complaints from 39 people who said they got sick at Kitty's late last month. The state confirmed nine cases of salmonella and 30 suspected cases of salmonella.

The source of the outbreak was traced to the antipasto salad.

The restaurant was closed July 5 and allowed to reopen Friday after a sanitization but has since closed again.

Health officials also recommended the restaurant test 46 employees who may have been working during the outbreak before allowing them back to work.

No one answered the phone at Kitty's on Tuesday.

© 2018 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Restaurant closed after 39 cases of suspected salmonella (2018, July 10) retrieved 26 June 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2018-07-restaurant-cases-salmonella.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.