

Cap'n crunch cereal recalled due to Salmonella scare

November 20 2018

(HealthDay)—A small number of boxes of Cap'n Crunch's Peanut

Butter Crunch are being recalled due to potential Salmonella contamination, Quaker Oats says.

The recall is for 21 boxes bought after Nov. 5 at Super Target Stores in Omaha and Lincoln, Nebraska, and in Wichita, Kansas, and at P-Fresh stores in St. Louis and Blue Springs, Missouri. The 17.1-ounce boxes have UPC code 0 30000 6211 1 and best-before dates of July 30, 2019, or July 31, 2019.

No illnesses related to the products have been reported, according to the company.

The recalled cereal should be thrown away or returned to the store for a refund. For more information, consumers can call 1-800-234-6281.
