

Central African Republic 'not prepared' for Ebola wave

July 25 2019

The Central African Republic is "not prepared" for a possible wave of the deadly Ebola virus from neighbouring DR Congo where an epidemic has claimed more than 1,700 lives, Health Minister Pierre Somse said Thursday.

The admission comes a week after the World Health Organization (WHO) declared the Ebola outbreak in the DR Congo a "public health emergency of international concern," a rare designation used only for the most serious epidemics.

No cases of Ebola have so far been reported in the CAR, but "economic and human exchanges are very intense" on the border between the two countries, Somse told a news conference.

"Our livestock farmers sell their cattle in the DR Congo," he noted. "Rebel groups and poachers go back and forth across the border. The risks are high."

The CAR "has to formulate a complex response with an under-funded healthcare system," the WHO's representative in the country, Severin Von Xylander, told the news conference.

The former French colony, though rich in natural resources, is one of the world's poorest and most unstable nations.

CAR has suffered several violent crises since 2003 when former president Francois Bozize seized power in a coup.

Nearly a quarter of the 4.5 million population have fled their homes including more than 400,000 who have emigrated including to the DR Congo.

© 2019 AFP

Citation: Central African Republic 'not prepared' for Ebola wave (2019, July 25) retrieved 24 April 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2019-07-central-african-republic-ebola.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.