

Some solid advice on new year's resolutions that might stick

December 30 2019

(HealthDay)—If you plan to make a New Year's resolution about improving your health, the American Medical Association (AMA) has some good suggestions.

"With too many holiday sweets and not enough exercise likely in the rearview mirror, now is the perfect time to consider your personal goals and how you can make positive health choices in the coming year," AMA President Dr. Patrice Harris said in an association news release.

"The good news is that there are a few easy steps you can take that will set you on the right track for a healthier 2020," Harris added.

Learn your risk for type 2 diabetes and take steps to prevent or delay the onset of the disease.

Get the recommended amount of physical activity. For adults, it's at least 150 minutes a week of moderate-intensity activity, or 75 minutes a week of vigorous-intensity activity.

Know your blood pressure and, if you have high blood pressure, take steps to get it under control. Doing so will reduce your risk of heart attack or stroke.

Cut back on processed foods, especially those with added sodium and sugar. Eat less red meat and processed meats, and eat more plant-based foods, such as olive oil, nuts and seed. Reduce your consumption of sugar-sweetened beverages and drink more water instead.

If you're prescribed antibiotics, take them exactly as directed. Antibiotic resistance is a serious public health problem.

If you drink alcohol, do so in moderation, which is up to one drink per day for women and two drinks per day for men.

If you use tobacco or electronic cigarettes, talk to your doctor about how to quit.

If you're prescribed prescription pain medications such as opioids, follow your doctor's instructions, store them safely to prevent misuse, and properly dispose of any leftover medication.

Make sure everyone in your family is up-to-date on their vaccines, including the annual flu shot for everyone age 6 months or older.

Manage stress and maintain good mental health by eating a healthy diet, getting enough sleep (at least 7.5 hours per night), doing daily exercise, and engaging in wellness activities such as yoga and meditation. Don't hesitate to seek help from a mental health professional when you need it.

More information: The American Academy of Family Physicians has more on healthy living.

Copyright © 2019 HealthDay. All rights reserved.

Citation: Some solid advice on new year's resolutions that might stick (2019, December 30) retrieved 4 May 2024 from

<https://medicalxpress.com/news/2019-12-solid-advice-year-resolutions.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--