

With measures lifted, Balkans hit by coronavirus case spike

June 11 2020, by Jovana Gec and Dusan Stojanovic

---

In this Wednesday, June 10, 2020 file photo, Red Star fans watching a Serbian National Cup semifinal soccer match between Partizan and Red Star in Belgrade, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

Serbia's president has canceled his party's campaign rallies and officials in Bosnia, North Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect anti-infection measures due to a spike in new coronavirus cases after the Balkan countries relaxed their restrictions.

President Aleksandar Vucic's Serbian Progressive Party will not hold rallies ahead of Serbia's June 21 parliamentary election to avoid further spread of the virus, state broadcaster RTS reported on Thursday.

Serbia went from having very strict lockdown measures to a near-total lifting of the government's emergency rules. Vucic's political opponents peg the move to the president's desire to hold the election, which originally was scheduled for April and canceled because of the pandemic, and to cement his grip on power.

Mass gatherings have gradually been allowed with people not keeping social distance or wearing masks although authorities advised utilizing the protections in public. Some 20,000 fans packed a stadium Wednesday during a soccer match between Belgrade's bitter rival teams, Red Star and Partizan.

Epidemiologists across the Balkan region have said that new clusters are appearing following events such as celebrations, family gatherings or funerals. In Serbia, clusters also have appeared on university campuses in bigger cities.

Red Star fans watch the Serbian National Cup semi final soccer match between Partizan and Red Star in Belgrade, Serbia, Wednesday, June 10, 2020. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic)

"The virus is still here," epidemiologist Branislav Todorovic, from the state crisis team, told RTS on Thursday. "We are on the line between an uncertain and a favorable situation."

"This is something we had expected, but we must all get serious again and implement protection measures," he warned.

Serbia reported 71 new confirmed cases of infections on Thursday, compared to 18 new cases on June 1. Similar numbers have been recorded in the past several days following a previous drop,

Officials in neighboring Bosnia appealed to citizens to follow social distancing and other public health rules aimed at curbing infections following a sudden increase in new cases, especially in the capital of Sarajevo.

A pediatric ward in a Sarajevo hospital has been temporarily closed after two staff members were confirmed to have the virus, while everyone else who worked in the ward were told to self-quarantine pending test results.

In this Wednesday, June 10, 2020 file photo, Partizan fans support their team prior a Serbian National Cup semifinal soccer match between Partizan and Red Star in Belgrade, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries.

(AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

Bosnian health authorities insisted that the rise was not alarming and the country's outbreak remains under control, despite clusters in certain areas. Nearly 60 new cases were reported in Bosnia on Thursday.

Recommendations by the authorities include the standard virus protection rules that many residents across the Balkans largely have abandoned as national lockdowns were eased—social distancing, refraining from shaking hands and hugging, frequent hand washing and taking other hygiene measures.

North Macedonia recorded seven deaths on Wednesday, its highest number of COVID -19 deaths in more than a month. The total number of confirmed cases in the country with about 2.1 million people stands at 3,364, including 164 deaths.

The country's health authorities said that the new spike in cases and deaths is related to mass gatherings three weeks ago, during the celebrations of religious holidays. The government last weekend ordered almost total lockdown for four regions, including the capital of Skopje, in a bid to stop the resurgence.

In this Tuesday, June 2, 2020 file photo, Serbian police officers wearing protective face masks watch the Serbian Cup soccer match between FK Indjija and Red Star in Indjija, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

In this Friday, May 15, 2020 file photo, Serbian President Aleksandar Vucic, center right, speaks with Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orbán during a meeting in Belgrade, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

In this Wednesday, June 10, 2020 file photo, Red Star fans watch a Serbian National Cup semifinal soccer match between Partizan and Red Star in Belgrade, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

In this Tuesday, April 21, 2020 file photo, an elderly woman wearing a mask against the spread of the new coronavirus walks during a curfew in downtown Belgrade, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

In this Thursday, April 16, 2020 file photo, a woman lights candles after the service in the St. Sava temple, the largest Orthodox church in the Balkan regions in Belgrade, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

In this Friday, April 24, 2020 file photo, a man wearing a mask against the spread of the new coronavirus exercises in a park during a curfew in Belgrade, Serbia. Serbia's president Aleksandar Vucic has cancelled his party's pre-election rallies and officials in Bosnia, Macedonia and Albania are appealing on citizens to respect protection measures after relaxation of rules against the new coronavirus led to a recent spike in cases in the Balkan countries. (AP Photo/Darko Vojinovic, File)

Authorities in Albania reported reported 44 new coronavirus cases on Thursday, the highest daily number so far and the third consecutive day with an increase. The country has been in a relaxed mode for more than two weeks.

Wider gatherings are still banned in Albania but people have not paid attention. In Albania too, very few people can be seen wearing masks and hand gloves despite repeated calls by authorities for people to avoid crowds to prevent further virus spread.

As of Wednesday, Albania had a total of 35 virus-related deaths and 1,385 confirmed cases.

© 2020 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed without permission.

Citation: With measures lifted, Balkans hit by coronavirus case spike (2020, June 11) retrieved 3 May 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2020-06-balkans-coronavirus-case-spike.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
--