

Coronavirus pandemic not over, German health minister warns

February 25 2022

German Health Minister Karl Lauterbach addresses the media during a press conference in Berlin, Germany, Friday, Feb. 25, 2022 on the current coronavirus pandemic in Germany. Credit: AP Photo/Michael Sohn

Germany's health minister warned Friday that the coronavirus pandemic isn't over yet, noting that the country is still seeing record infections and high numbers of deaths.

The Robert Koch Institute, Germany's disease control agency, reported 210,743 newly confirmed cases of COVID-19 and 226 deaths in the past 24 hours. Officials say laboratory data suggests there may be a large number of undetected cases.

"We need to be careful not to think that the pandemic is over," Health Minister Karl Lauterbach told reporters in Berlin.

A subtype of the omicron variant, dubbed BA.2, could lead to a further rise in cases, he said.

Lauterbach urged Germany's 16 states not to relax restrictions faster than recently agreed.

He rejected the idea of declaring a so-called Freedom Day as some other countries have done, saying it would give people a false sense of security. Unlike many comparable countries, Germany also has a higher rate of unvaccinated people over 60 who are particularly vulnerable to serious illness if they contract COVID-19, he said.

© 2022 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed without permission.

Citation: Coronavirus pandemic not over, German health minister warns (2022, February 25) retrieved 25 April 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2022-02-coronavirus-pandemic-german-health-minister.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.