

Video: Exertional heat stroke

July 25 2022

Credit: Unsplash/CC0 Public Domain

What happens when the human body gets too hot? And what can you do if someone gets too hot?

Douglas Casa, professor of kinesiology and chief executive officer of UConn's Korey Stringer Institute—a leading authority on research, advocacy, and education about exertional heat stroke—explains in this edition of Science in Seconds.

Provided by University of Connecticut

Citation: Video: Exertional heat stroke (2022, July 25) retrieved 21 May 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2022-07-video-exertional.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.