

Japanese people living longer than ever: government

16 July 2009

Japanese people are living longer than ever, with the average life expectancy now 86.05 years for women and 79.29 years for men, the health ministry said Thursday.

Japanese women extended their life expectancy by almost 22 days in 2008 from the previous year, while men added another 37 days, the ministry said.

The Japanese are renowned for their longevity attributed in part to a healthy traditional diet and active lifestyle.

But longevity is also set to cause serious problems for Japan, which has one of the world's lowest birth rates, leaving a shrinking working population to support a mass of retirees.

(c) 2009 AFP

APA citation: Japanese people living longer than ever: government (2009, July 16) retrieved 21 January 2022 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2009-07-japanese-people-longer.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.