

Canadian sues hospital for shortening penis in botched surgery

13 June 2014

A Canadian man is suing a Montreal area hospital over a botched surgery that left his penis one inch shorter, claiming it ruined his sex life and his marriage, media said Friday.

The man, whose identity was withheld by Sun Media, told the newspaper chain he had been rushed to hospital in 2011 with a fractured appendage. The injury was sustained while having sex with his wife.

Surgery to correct the injury reportedly left a "permanent scar" on his penis and reduced its length by "about an inch" (2.5 centimeters).

The man claims he was unable to have sex for two years and his wife eventually walked out on him.

He is seeking Can$155,000 ($142,680) in damages for negligence and "indescribable anguish," according to a statement of claim cited by Sun Media.

The allegations have not been proven in court.

© 2014 AFP

APA citation: Canadian sues hospital for shortening penis in botched surgery (2014, June 13) retrieved 28 September 2021 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2014-06-canadian-sues-hospital-shortening-penis.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.