

Oral contraceptives may impact aspects of arthritis in women

18 August 2015

This is a hand afflicted by rheumatoid arthritis. Credit: The University of Manchester

New research indicates that use of oral contraceptives may provide benefits for women with inflammatory arthritis.

Among 273 women with early inflammatory arthritis, women who had used oral contraceptives in the past and those who were currently using them reported fewer problems related to how well they can function, their mood, and how active their disease is.

The findings are published in Arthritis Care & Research.

More information: Arthritis Care & Research, DOI: 10.1002/acr.22667

Provided by Wiley

APA citation: Oral contraceptives may impact aspects of arthritis in women (2015, August 18) retrieved 28 February 2021 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2015-08-oral-contraceptives-impact-aspects-arthritis.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.