

Advocates fear more heroin withdrawal deaths in jails

July 11 2016

Heroin withdrawal is rarely fatal, but more than a half-dozen people have died behind bars in the U.S. during the last two years after suffering from severe symptoms that their families say went untreated.

Civil rights lawyers fear the number could grow given the nation's heroin epidemic.

In Pennsylvania, the mother of an 18-year-old woman who collapsed and later died after days of severe vomiting sued Lebanon County officials on Monday. Stephanie Moyer's lawsuit accuses them of ignoring her need for medical care.

Prisons in larger cities, including Philadelphia, say they assess addicts upon intake and provide intravenous fluids and other medications if needed.

But news accounts and court files detail other apparent withdrawal deaths in jails in Oregon, Michigan, Colorado and elsewhere.

© 2016 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

Citation: Advocates fear more heroin withdrawal deaths in jails (2016, July 11) retrieved 28 September 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2016-07-advocates-heroin-deaths.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.