

NY doctors charged over opioid prescriptions amid epidemic

12 October 2018

Prosecutors unveiled charges on Thursday against including one patient who overdosed, they added. five New York doctors, a pharmacist and associates for allegedly illegally distributing millions of oxycodone pills and fueling the nation's opioid addiction crisis.

The opioid epidemic has helped fuel the first drop in US life expectancy at birth over two consecutive years since the early 1960s, statisticians say.

The 10 defendants, arrested in raids across the US financial capital, were accused of conducting little or no examination of patients before prescribing the pills in exchange for hefty cash payments.

In 2016, 63,600 people died nationwide from a drug overdose, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. That works out to an average of 174 Americans a day.

"They were drug dealers in white coats," said Geoffrey Berman, the US Attorney for Manhattan. "They hid behind their medical licenses to sell addictive, dangerous narcotics," he added.

In the city of New York alone, around 1,500 individuals died of drug overdose in 2017, and the majority of deaths involved opioids.

One doctor with offices in the Bronx and Westchester was accused of issuing oxycodone prescriptions in exchange for thousands of dollars, expensive dinners, high-end whisky, cruises and all-expenses-paid trips.

The battery of charges includes conspiracy to distribute controlled substances, which carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison.

© 2018 AFP

Another, Dante Cubangbang, 50, and his associates at a clinic in Queens, allegedly prescribed more than six million oxycodone pills knowing that the recipients had no legitimate medical need for them.

Those at the clinic allegedly collected more than $5 million in cash fees. "Part of what is driving this opioid epidemic is a prescription epidemic," Berman told a news conference.

"They did it for a very simple reason: greed. They did it for cash, for meals and expensive gifts," he added.

Carl Anderson, 57, a Staten Island physician, often saw patients in the middle of the night, where noisy crowds of pill-seeking patients prompted 911 calls from neighbors, prosecutors said.

Anthony Pietropinto, an 80-year-old Manhattan psychiatrist, wrote prescriptions to drug addicts,

APA citation: NY doctors charged over opioid prescriptions amid epidemic (2018, October 12) retrieved 16 June 2019 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2018-10-ny-doctors-opioid-prescriptions-epidemic.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.