

Video: Is getting COVID-19 a moral failure?

7 February 2022

Credit: Pixabay/CC0 Public Domain

You've masked up. You've vaccinated with a shot of Pfizer twice, with a booster for a third round of protection. You've avoided large gatherings and stood 6 feet apart for the better portion of two years. And yet you've just tested positive for COVID-19.

Graham Reside, executive director of the Cal Turner Program for Moral Leadership in the Professions and assistant professor at the Vanderbilt Divinity School, discusses how the evolving pandemic has challenged views on illness as a moral issue—and why our communities are at a crossroads with emotions about contracting COVID-19.

Reside teaches courses that help professionals develop their ethical identities and leadership capacities and promote inter-professional collaboration in addressing social problems.

Provided by Vanderbilt University

APA citation: Video: Is getting COVID-19 a moral failure? (2022, February 7) retrieved 26 September 2022 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2022-02-video-covid-moral-failure.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.